

Case study– Social Safety Nets Program, Government of Guinea

Biometric identification at the service of the Social Safety nets program

Context

As part of the Human Capital Plan for Africa, the World Bank aims to strengthen safety nets, known as social safety nets by 2023. It supports sub-Saharan African countries in the establishment of social protection systems, intended to break the cycles of reproduction of poverty.

In Guinea, the government implemented the so-called social safety nets nationwide.

Objectives

Within the context of the program, the government wanted to durably identify the beneficiaries of the Social Safety nets program for Guinea through the creation of a biometric identification system.

M2M Group's response

Since 2018, the integrated solution MX ID™ solution has been centralizing the Social Nets program registrations including their updates.

Being a turnkey solution hosted in the Azure Cloud, it combines performance, security and flexibility. On a functional level :

- It interfaces with the Guinean Ministry of Economy and Finance's Infrastructure with a database of 500 000 people.

- Enables Biometric identification with Smartphones and Android, essential inclusion tools in Africa.
- Is scalable and can enroll millions of people, while the project expands.
- An application dedicated for enrollment has been developed enabling to:
 - Register the program's beneficiaries
 - Verify the collected Data
 - Operate in Online and Offline mode

Benefits for the Guinean State and Guinean people

The Ministry has equipped Guineans with a complete mechanism enabling the implementation of the Social Nets program carried out by the World Bank.

M2M Group's solution allows to identify all beneficiaries relying on a dynamic database, while avoiding fraud.

The distribution of social assistance is now more rigorous. Once identified when they register, beneficiaries receive a personal card. Thus, targeted households are identified, followed and supported socially over time.

M2M Group's enrollment solution guarantees the long-term social protection. It reflects the program's efficiency and sustainability as designed by the World Bank.
