

Case study– Cheikh Anta Diop University, Dakar

Contactless multi-service card issuing platform

Context

The world of higher education has entered the “all digital” era, with the aim of offering a full range of tools providing better exchange, better learning, and better management of all aspects of student life along with administrative and teaching staff.

Objectives

The University of Dakar, the first and oldest university in Sub-Saharan Africa, wanted to improve daily lives of its students and support their mobility within and outside the campus. The university was therefore looking for a solution that would:

Control students' identity, access to infrastructures (library, restaurants and university accommodation) and electronic networks of the university

Offer students a range of fully dematerialized services accessible via mobile terminals, self-service kiosks and the Internet

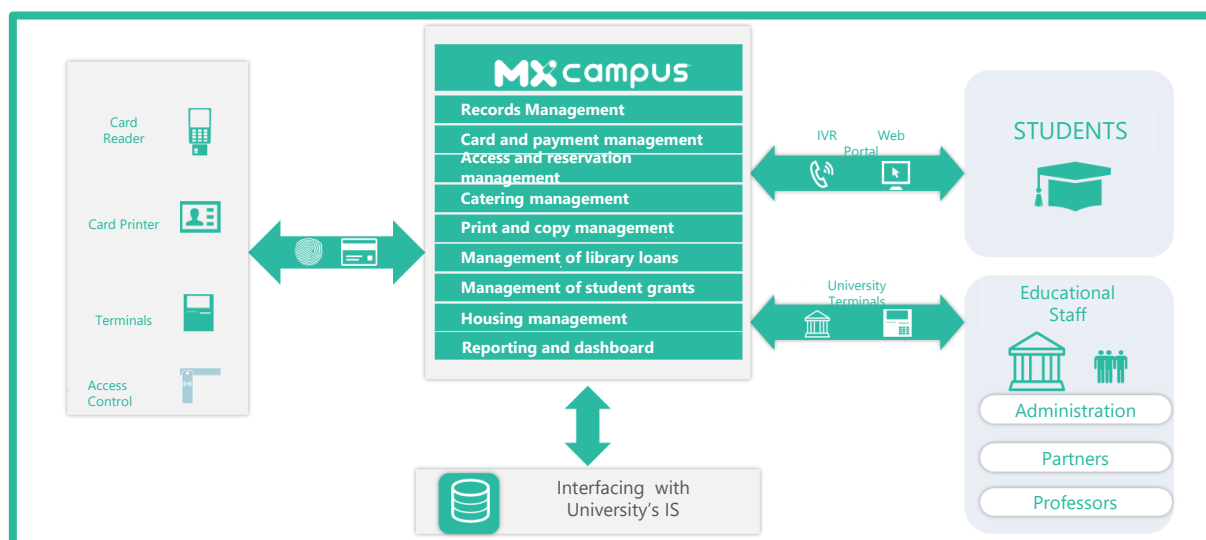

Dematerialize and make the administrative request management process more reliable (schooling certificate, change of orientation, online printouts, consultation of time schedules, examination calendars, grades, attendance records, etc.

M2M Group Response

M2M Group, through its MX Campus™ technology, was selected by Cheikh Anta Diop University for its program of contactless multiservice university cards, allowing:

- to combine identity and strong authentication applications,
- management of access to university services,
- and opening up to payment and public transport applications.

Complete multi-channel management platform

Benefits for UCAD

MX Campus™ allows the university to generalize its new service and multi-service card system to the entire university community, comprising 100,000 students, 2,600 teachers and 1,400 administrative staff.

Moreover, the platform provided by M2M Group offers a vast horizon for evolution towards new services within and outside the campus. The multi-service card can in fact be used for high-value applications such as the dematerialized granting of scholarship, access to public transport and multi-channel payment.
